RACE RIOTS THREATEN CHICAGO

Seeing Things

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN
Director
Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau, Washington, D. C.

Washington, July 28.—Are you a good observer? Could you, if requested, tell the color of the eyes of three hundred persons? Or whether the numerals on your watch are in figures or Roman notation? It would be of great assistance to your people department if you could. The people could report signs of trouble like these. As it is, the police are constantly being asked to trace and recover lost articles and missing persons, supplied only with vague and often misleading descriptions.

It is well known, for instance, that automobile owners seldom know the numbers of their license tags. The less the number of the car, the more the owner is even uncertain on the point of color. The other day a man telephoned the Washington police department that his car, which was navy blue with green stripes, had been stolen. The police obtained a further description of the car from the agency which sold it, and finally succeeded in recovering it. But the stripes on the car was not green but distinctly yellow.

Descriptions Vary.
A few weeks ago a retail merchant in a middle western city reported to the police the disappearance of his senior clerk, with the contents of the cash register. The merchant described the young man as being above average height, with black hair and brown eyes, and a fair complexion. The woman who rented the apartment above the store and who claimed to have seen the man leaving it, carrying a suitcase, late at night, described him as a short, stout man with dark auburn hair, grey eyes and a swarthy skin. How would you like to get on the trail of a criminal, armed with two such descriptions as these?

Major Raymond W. Pullman, commissioner of police in Washington, has recently requested every automobile owner to keep a card in his pocket or desk, containing an exact description of his car, including the motor number and any peculiar marks of identification. The New York police department has gone a step further and asked every citizen to write a description of his cherished articles of personal property, as well as one of each member of his family. It can be easily seen that a card retained in case of emergency. It has been found that few individuals can put down this information without having the objects of their attention in their mind. The greater the number of items, the more the imagination insists upon interfering and inserting details that are really not there at all.

World's Largest Result.
This added to the fact that the eyesight of many people is not normal, accounts for the weird exaggerations and contradictions which often get into print. Take the case of the "Chicago riot" for example. The greatest experts on pugilistic matters, trained observers, witnessed and reported this fight for the newspapers, and every one of them reported that Dempsey stood with his back to the ring until the call to battle had been sounded twice; another said that he stood facing Williams, eagerly waiting the signal to start; a third said that he was unable to tell from these accounts what was the color of the umbrella hoisted over the champion's head; and the first entered the ring according to the testimony of the witnesses, a professor in one of our middle western universities conducted an experiment for the purpose of classifying the color of the paint in the class was about to take place in the classroom; that the class was to watch carefully as the professor wrote a report of what they had seen.

In They Rushed.
Suddenly he finished speaking when a man, introduced as Jones, with a black mask over his eyes, rushed into the room. In his left hand he carried a bag half full of hail, and in his right hand a small wrench. A streak of white paint was smeared across his left cheek. Just inside the door of the classroom he pointed his wrench at the pursuing party, shouting "Stand back, or I'll shoot." Then he rushed to the door, tripped to his knees and flung the bag on the floor. "There is it; take it," he said, and rushed out of the room again. At this point the professor inquired of the shouting Smith if he had seen anything, and Smith replied that he had seen a man in a black suit, some grey suit, and some blue suit. He was described as carrying a pistol, which he snapped several times, crying "Get out of here." One of the students said that he dropped an umbrella on the floor, another reported that he had yelled, "Catch that man!"

What Did He Say?
Even the professor, who was in the drama, was falsely described. He was reported as saying, "What's all this?" "Hullo, what's going on here?" and only one student even approximately set down what the professor had said. Conflicting testimony is common in the court room. Sometimes a hundred witnesses will tell completely different stories of how a crime was committed. Not long ago a man was murdered in his home. Some of her jewelry was missing, and it was suspected that the crime had been committed by a tramp who had appeared in the town on that day. Four persons were found who declared that they had observed the tramp leave the woman's house by the side door about half-past eight at night.

When asked why they thought it was the tramp, each was surprised and finally said it was because of his appearance. Asked to describe his appearance, the four witnesses agreed only as to one detail—namely, that he wore a cap. One woman swore that she could see by the street lamp that he was unkempt, and that he thrust something into his pocket as he over-

DUNWIDDIE WILL PUSH WET CASES

DISTRICT ATTORNEY SAYS HE WILL PROSECUTE ALL CASES.

WARRANT ISSUED FOR SALOON MAN

Says Drinks Containing Any Alcohol Are Intoxicating and Cannot Be Sold.

"Any local saloonkeeper who is selling drinks in his establishment containing alcohol regardless of how small the percent of alcohol in the drink," District Attorney Stanley Dunwiddie said today on his arrival home after spending the past week in St. Louis, Mo., where he had not been furnished with licenses by the city council and they were violating the law which forbids the sale of drinks containing any alcohol without a license.

Local Saloon Man Charged.
One complaint was made to Mr. Dunwiddie by a local saloonkeeper selling beer containing alcohol Friday and Saturday. A warrant for the arrest of the man has been issued, but not arrest was made up to 10 o'clock. He will probably be brought before Judge H. L. Maxfield tomorrow morning.

Early Saturday afternoon it was reported about the city that 2.75 percent beer was being sold in some of the downtown saloons. The news spread like wildfire and before long the saloons were crowded with thirsty patrons. Saloonkeepers were boasting of selling the famous 2.75 percent beer to their patrons. All were in a hurry to get where the real amber colored fluid was being sold.

Say It Was Near Beer.
Many of the saloonkeepers claim that the beer was sold Saturday night was nothing but the near beer and someone simply started a story that real beer was being sold. It was noticeable, however, that many of the old timers who were up at the bar and it all seemed to be enjoying their drinks.

But Williams, internal revenue collector at Madison in discussing the incident today, said that any saloonkeeper who was selling liquor containing alcohol more than one-half of one percent could be prosecuted under the war time prohibition act and that if he drank was being sold containing any alcohol at all, the saloonkeepers could be arrested for selling without licenses.

District Attorney Stanley Dunwiddie said that he had received today a complaint from a local saloonkeeper. He said that the police department had secured a bottle of beer and it would be sent to Madison to be analyzed.

Will Prosecute.
"I don't care who the saloonkeeper is or what he has been advised to do I will prosecute him, if I find that he is selling drinks containing alcohol," Mr. Dunwiddie said.

At the last meeting of the council it was voted to grant the local saloon licenses on the condition that the war time prohibition bill was repealed by President Wilson. The nations chief executive failed to repeal the law and the licenses were not granted by the council.

Since that time several of the saloons have opened and have been selling near beer. The question that now arises is, does near beer contain any alcohol? If it does those that are selling it are liable to be prosecuted by the District Attorney.

Washington, July 28.—President Wilson began discussion of the peace treaty today with democratic senators. Further conferences with republicans, a dozen of whom already have visited the White House, were held in abeyance.

Senator Thomas, democrat of Colorado, was the first to enter. "He described the talk with the president as 'highly satisfactory,' but refused to go into details of the discussion."

Minneapolis, Minn., July 28.—Two persons were instantly killed, three were seriously injured and thirteen others were hurt in a head-on collision between street cars on the Lake Minnesota line today. A passenger car collided with a baggage-express car.

Girl Designs Flag for League of Nations

Washington, July 28.—Representative Stenerson presented to the president a proposed flag of the league of nations which was designed by Miss Hazel Berg, a 13-year-old school girl of Briskin, Minn. The president said that as soon as the league was organized he would present the flag to the proper authorities.

She Wants Aid

Madame Turczynowicz, the accredited representative of the Lithuanian government, is in New York to get aid for her country. She states that the Lithuanian gold was taken by the Germans and that they left in exchange many of their marks. The value of which is now but eight cents. Disease is rampant in Lithuania. Castor oil costs thirty marks a spoonful. A supper costs 400 or 500 marks, and boots cost from 800 to 1,000 marks, and then they are scarce. Madame Turczynowicz was born in Canada and her husband was killed in the war.

Fitzgerald Is Charged with Child Murder

Chicago, July 28.—Formal charge of murder will be filed today against Thomas Fitzgerald, who yesterday confessed to the police in the presence of three witnesses that he killed the little girl who was found under a pile of coal beneath the basement steps.

Fitzgerald, who was janitor of a building in the vicinity of the Wilkins' home, had often seen the girl, and last Tuesday offered her candy. After entering her to his rooms he told the police that he strangled her to stop her crying.

Before I knew what I was doing, I had my hands about her throat and had strangled her," said Fitzgerald. He had been "classified by the police as a motor." Fitzgerald, mother of the child, is seriously ill from a nervous collapse. Mrs. Fitzgerald, wife of the confessed slayer, who is being held by the police as a witness, became hysterical today and is under the care of a physician.

Fitzgerald was examined by several alienists today, who will testify at the coroner's inquest.

TRAVELING MEN ENTER GERMANY

Coblenz, Sunday, July 27.—Army headquarters yesterday gave permission for "live American" commercial travelers to proceed through the Coblenz bridgehead on business in the interior of Germany.

Opportunities for the re-opening of trade relations between the United States and Germany was thus definitely afforded, allowed American firms to compete with European houses in the German market.

Most All-Yanks to Leave France by Month

Paris, July 28.—All American troops except a few thousand, who would remain on the Rhine, should be able to leave France by September 1, in the event the tentative agreement for the sale of American army supplies in France to the French government is approved.

HUGHES OUTLINES PEACE TREATY RESERVATIONS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, July 28.—A number of reservations to the league of nations covenant have been suggested by Charles Evans Hughes, New York, in an opinion transmitted under date of July 24, to Senator Frederick Hale of Maine. The opinion, as shown by the correspondence made public here today, was sought by the senator in a letter of July 18. The senator wrote that he felt sure that considerably more than one-third of the senate would refuse to ratify the peace treaty with the covenant as it now stands but that he personally did not want to see that happen.

There is plain need of a league of nations," Mr. Hughes wrote in reply, "in order to provide the adequate development of international law for creating and maintaining organs of national justice and the machinery of conciliation and conference, and for giving effect to measures of international co-operation which from time to time will be agreed upon."

"I perceive no reason why these objects cannot be obtained without sacrificing the essential interests of the United States," Mr. Hughes wrote. "There is a wide ground between aloofness and injurious commitments."

"I think that the prudent course is to enter the proposed league with reservations, which should be adequate to our security, which should meet ready assent, and thus to establish a condition of amity at the earliest possible moment."

"Reservations would be ineffectual unless they constitute a part of the instrument of ratification."

"If the senate should adopt reservations by a majority vote," the senator continued, "I assume that these will be made a part of the proposed resolution of assent to the treaty and the question will then be whether the senate will give its consent with these reservations, or by the requisite two-thirds vote."

"If the proposed reservations are reasonable, the responsibility for the defeat of the treaty, if it is defeated, will be with those who refuse the treaty essential to the assent."

Still Up to Wilson.
"If the senate gives its assent to the treaty with reservations, the concurrent action of the president will be necessary as ratification will not be complete without his action, and the responsibility for a refusal to give the ratification with the reservations as proposed by the senate as a part of the instrument of ratification, would thus lie with the president."

Washington, July 28.—The beginning of the tenth week of senate debate on the peace treaty was accompanied by many evidences of expectancy that statements from President Wilson soon would clarify the position of the president with these reservations.

Indications at the White House that the president intended a few days ago to make a public statement regarding the reservation proposal, led senate leaders to believe that the lines of that controversy might speedily be drawn.

Forty French War Brides Now Have Town Guessing

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.] Burlington Vt.—This city is all excited over the forthcoming arrival of 40 French war brides, the wives of troopers of the Third cavalry, recent overseas arrivals, who have been ordered to Fort Ethan Allen.

None of the young brides, who are said to be pretty, can speak English, and the various welfare societies here are at wits end to adequately provide for them. However, the Neighborhood house, one of the oldest mansions in the city, which was used during the war as a soldiers' club, is being fitted up for their welcome.

As the pay of an enlisted trooper is only $30 a month, with the present price of food and clothing it will be necessary for the brides to assist in earning money toward their own living expenses. The Neighborhood house will be used as a receiving station where the girls will live until suitable employment for them has been found.

BUSINESS MEN CARRY ON CHURCH SERVICE WITHOUT PASTOR

The Methodist church people demonstrated that it was not necessary for them to have a pastor to conduct church services, by arranging for an impromptu platform meeting yesterday morning with a number of short addresses made by local men, along the line of the topic, "Foundations of a House."

Richards presided over the meeting and introduced the speakers. He said that the housing proposition was uppermost at this time and the minds of people were naturally thinking of the problems connected with building. It had been expected, he said, that a local architect would discuss plans connected with the building of a house, but he was not able to be present.

"The Foundations of a House," was discussed by D. C. Barker, who thought that the only safe foundation for human life was the life of Christ. He quoted the words of Jesus when speaking to Peter: "Thou art the Rock, and upon this rock will I build my church." He also quoted the words of St. Paul to the Corinthians when he said: "Other foundations hath no man made, except on Jesus Christ."

Count Townsend spoke briefly on "Counting the Cost," in which he called attention to the fact that in these days the cost was the big thing. He emphasized the idea that to make a successful and happy Christian life one must put his whole soul into it, and to build ideal homes of character, one must bend every effort to make it a thing.

The subject of "Building and Materials" was taken up by E. E. Van Pool, who called attention to the idea of having a strong foundation. He pointed out that the foundation of a house might look practically alike, but when the rains and floods came, one would fall and the other would stand strong and safe. He gave a word of advice to the people, concerning the care of the body, which he said was the dwelling of the soul, and the temple of the Holy Spirit.

Beaumont spoke on the subject of "Safeguards for Buildings," including lightning rods in this category. Of the latter he showed that buildings became safeguarded by electricity and the rods carry off the surplus, thus protecting the building. "All lives," he said, "had within them a certain amount of evil, and when they lived amidst storms and temptations, something disastrous was liable to happen, unless they were supplied with the rod of faith, which could harmlessly carry off the evil."

He then read an illustration of the words of Paul spoken to the Corinthians: "Above all put on the shield of faith, whereby ye shall be able to withstand all the darts of the wicked." He emphasized the phrase: "Let us be prepared to resist evil when it comes to us."

D. C. Richards closed the discussion by saying that he had become so common to many people as to be quite second nature. He dwelt on the fact that the soul was only a tenant of the body, and that the body was only a place for the soul to move out. But he called attention to the comforting words of the master: "Let not your heart be troubled. In my father's house there is many mansions, and I will prepare a place for you." He expressed a wish that all might join the glorious procession and when moving day came, enter into the better place prepared on high.

The men's chorus of the church sang several selections. E. E. Van Pool sang a solo with chorus by a quartet. The quartet was composed of Mr. Van Pool, Mr. T. Richards, Mr. Jacobs and George St. Clair.

C. E. Beaumont led in prayer and pronounced the words of dismissal.

BOYS ON PROBATION ABSCOND TO ENLIST

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, July 28.—More than 400 boys on parole from the boys' industrial school at Waubesa, absconded during the war and enlisted in the army or navy, according to J. T. J. Taylor, secretary of the state board of control. Practically everyone of them has now returned to Wisconsin, and as an excuse for absconding presented his honorable discharge from the army or navy to the board.

But the boys from the industrial school were not the only ones on parole who absconded to enter the service. Several who had been paroled from the reformatory at Green Bay enlisted, most of them under assumed names, but they returned as soon as discharged and immediately reported to the board from France, stating that they could not resist the temptation to enlist when there was such an urgent call for men and promising to report and finish their sentences as soon as discharged from the service. But the governor and the members of the board of control decided long ago that every man who had violated his parole to fight for his country would be given his full citizenship upon presentation of an honorable discharge.

"Only last week," said B. M. Jostad, state probation officer today, "a young man convicted of burglary in Eau Claire county and who had been placed on probation, walked into our office in his uniform. He had been placed on a farm in Eau Claire county, but the urgent call for men had gotten under his hide. He absconded, went to St. Paul and enlisted in the army, was sent to France, where he went over the top seven times. He was discharged a week ago and immediately came to our office, ready to take his punishment. When he presented his honorable discharge from the army and his record showing that he had gone over the top seven times, the board ordered his discharge at once, and $45 which he had earned, before absconding, and which had been deposited with my department was turned over to him."

When the war is over and most of the young men who absconded have returned and been discharged, the difficulties which the board of control meet during the war are coming to light. When the first call for men came in the spring of 1917 many probationers asked the board of control for permission to enlist. The matter was taken up with the war department, only to receive the reply that no man who had even been convicted of a felony could enlist in the army or navy.

Then another side of the story developed. The draft came on and many of those men and boys feared they would be turned against them, that they would be liable for punishment under the espionage act for evading the draft. Not a few of them stole away in the night and went to Canada, where they enlisted. These assumed names, were sent to France and more than one was awarded the Croix de Guerre.

ART OF OBSERVING THINGS IS URGED BY POLICE CHIEFS

Every man has a little girl of nine who gave the detective on the case his first correct clue. She stated that he had not worn an overcoat at all, but a cape. This caused the detective to eliminate the tramp and start on another line of investigation, which finally resulted in the conviction of a man who was not a tramp at all.

She Was Sure of Him. Another case which shows the fallibility of the human eye is that of a wealthy manufacturer who was attacked by a man who forced his way into his home in the suburbs some years ago, and stabbed the manufacturer to death. The stranger also attempted to shoot him with a revolver, but the manufacturer was knocked down by the weight of his hand. By the time the police reached the scene, the man had made good his escape, but the wife was absolutely certain as to his identity. She was dressed in dark clothes, dark cap and muffer, she asserted, but she knew "by the look in his eyes" that he was her cousin, a young ex-soldier.

Provoked Alibi. Fortunately, the cousin was able to prove a conclusive alibi, and the investigation continued until sometime later another ex-soldier, bearing a resemblance to the cousin, was arrested as the murderer. Again the wife, as well as the family servants, identified the man as the manufacturer's assailant, though they were a good deal certain in this regard. Thus, the lives of two innocent men were placed in jeopardy by incorrect observation. The habit of accurate observation is, it is held, is not difficult to acquire. Most minds are indifferent to details because they have not been trained to retain details. If one would each day consciously take note of the details of the appearance of some one associate or object and implant those details in his mind, going back to them later, he would be giving himself calisthenics in the art of observation. Soon the mind would automatically store away such details.

TOBACCO GROWERS TO HAVE FIELD DAY

It's coming. The tobacco growers field day, Friday, August 15, in the tobacco experimental fields at the university farm, is being advertised.

The time will be spent in inspecting the fields where important trials are in progress. In one field, will be a comparison of the comparative varieties with the root rot resistant strains which have been developed at Wisconsin's experiment station. In another will be found the selected plants which are being used to increase the supply of root rot resistant tobacco seed needed by Wisconsin growers. On a nearby tract are growing all of the varieties of tobacco grown in the United States, including this interesting exhibit are rotation experiments, showing tobacco grown following clover, alfalfa and timothy, corn, cow peas and tobacco itself.

The program which will start at 10 a. m. is in charge of a committee headed by James Johnson who is directing the tobacco investigations at the university and is also doing important work for the United States department of agriculture in many of the leading tobacco sections of the country.

Although Wisconsin's crop was worth nearly $20,000,000 last year there is, according to Mr. Johnson, an opportunity to increase the profits from tobacco growing by improving the quality.

"Prices," he declares, "will likely depend more and more upon quality in the future. The best quality is secured from the crop that makes rapid unchecked growth. The experimental station has shown beyond question that, except in cases of extreme drought, in conjunction with poorly prepared soil, practically all good checked growth of tobacco plants is due to root diseases harbored in the soil."

HORSE STILL HOLDS HIS OWN IN THESE DAYS OF AUTOMOBILES

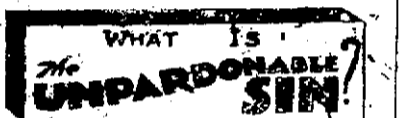

Notwithstanding the inroads made by the automobile and the farm tractor the horse still holds his own remarkably well in this state. The breeding of draft horses here is likely to be stimulated by the report of the department and the state department of agriculture will show.

The number of public service stations decreased 392 head in the state this season compared with a reduction of 367 head in 1918. This was less than expected, however, and interest in horse breeding began to pick up as the season advanced and since the report was written, during the first week of July, the market for good horses has shown a marked upward trend. Draft horses are now going abroad in considerable numbers despite high ocean rates and they are said to be costing the exporters around $285 a head for the best animals. Recent improvement in the demand for work horses of good draft type and quality and the starting of exportation at profitable prices, corroborates the predictions made in the report of the department and emphasizes the advice there given to farmers that they should continue to produce heavy draft horses and develop the department's footings also we shall soon face a dearth of needed work horses.

The total number of public service stations in Wisconsin in 1918 was 2437 and in 1919 is 2045. The total number of horses in the state has decreased from 708,000 in 1918 to 694, in 1919, a loss of 14,000 head, while the average price was $117.00 in 1918 and $109.00 in 1919, the total value now being $7,546,000. Horses of the entire country have decreased 21,000 head during the year, this being the first time we have had to report a reduction.

In 1919 pure bred stallions decreased 193 head in Wisconsin, compared with a loss of 162 head in 1918. The total number of pure bred Percherons now in 918, compared with 1025 in 1918; Belgians, 151, Clydesdales 46, French drafts, 47 and Shires 27. Standard bred trotters number 119, compared with 124 in 1918.

Grade stallions have decreased 233 per cent and scrub stallions 20.2 per cent during the year. In 1911 scrub stallions numbered 873 head; now the number is 170. The total number of pure bred stallions in Wisconsin is 1368, of grades 507 and of scrubs 170. The percentage of pure bred to grade and scrub stallions compared now is 69.3, in 1907 it was 85. All stallion enrollment (license) certificates expire in this state January 1, 1920, and must be renewed before April 1, 1920, the fee for renewals being $1.00, instead of 50 cents, as heretofore. The present legislature amended the stallion law to that effect. The fee for a duplicate certificate, in case of loss, has also been increased to $1.

RECORD IN BUILDING OF EVERY KIND IS BEING MADE IN STATE

Madison, July 28.—A record in building construction of every kind is being made in Wisconsin, the quarterly report of the plumbing division of the state board of health reveals. This report, made to State Chief Engineer John D. Mack, predicts continuance of this activity indefinitely. The report shows that the standards are under way in a large number of districts. These new structures are planned with an eye to modern sanitation in keeping with the standards now recognized as essential for the growth of school children.

Modern public comfort stations for fair grounds are increasing in number, the report shows. A code governing the construction of public comfort stations for villages and cities, required by a new law, is being prepared.

The department helped in formulating rules and regulations governing sanitation of pea canneries, which the Wisconsin Pea Packers' association has adopted for its inspection service.

An examination for licensing of plumbers during the second quarter was held at Beloit, Eau Claire and Milwaukee. Nine out of 14 candidates for master's licenses, and 11 out of 23 for journeyman licenses, passed.

The state inspectors visited 266 cities during the quarter and made 669 inspections of installations, of which about 7.1 percent were rejected. Universal improvement in work and standards are reported and the general sanitary conditions relating to waste disposal were found fair.

ALL TOGETHER

Build Now Repair Now
Paint Now Buy Now

Every Dollar Put to Work Now is a Foundation Stone in Building Our Local Prosperity.

THERE'S a tremendous lot of building that must be done in this city and we've got to get at it. We need homes, and apartment buildings, and schools, to say nothing of business buildings, and unless we get them soon our city is going to suffer.

For two years all building has been stopped. Population has increased, rents have jumped. People are paying premium prices to find any kind of a place to live in.

We Need To Get Business Going

We'll All Profit If We Work Together

It's perfectly obvious that such conditions can't be permitted to last very long if this city is to be a desirable place to live and transact business. If we don't remedy it, we'll lose a lot of prosperity that should come to us—and that reacts on every man and woman that lives here.

At the same time, we need to keep business going. The end of the war has brought us an industrial situation that we must face in common. Building is the quickest possible way to stimulate business and tide over this crucial period. And we can build as cheaply now as we will be able to for years to come.

WHAT we need is to get our bankers and property owners and contractors together at once. We must all talk building and plan building. Materials are available, railroads can make deliveries, there is sufficient labor and there's a demand for buildings that is unprecedented. Surely it's a favorable market.

Prices aren't going down soon—there's nothing to gain by delay and much we can't lose. Let's get together—and do it AT ONCE.

A LITTLE SLICE OF LIFE.
We were looking for a cook.
Everybody said we couldn't find one.
But we fooled everybody.

We went out and found one.
A very intelligent maid, we thought.
And we took her home on the 4:37.

And guarded her closely.
Against a host of our friends.
Who were in the same train.

When we got to the house.
The maid told us her terms.
She would do no laundry work.

And NO COOKING.
We would have to get some one.
To prepare her meals.

If we did that, she said.
Everything would be O. K.
So now all we have got to do

Is to get somebody to cook for our new maid.
As somebody has remarked,
We are lying in a great age.

Application blanks for jobs still contain the old question: "To what extent do you use intoxicating liquors?" The answer should be: "About 2.75 per cent."

New Jersey railroad conductor has been bequeathed $15,000 by a grateful passenger for "always being pleasant." There won't be a scowl on any conductor's face in this country for 10 years. A nation owes its thanks to the thoughtful citizen who died and left this money.

OH, MAGGIE!
A standing in a garden,
Where posies dwell, galore,
There mused a lovely maiden:
And this is what she wore:

A petticoat of petals
Of purest virgin white,
A bodice of plump orange,
She was a winsome sight.

Alas, she was lacking,
Her stockings of sea green
Encased but a single limb,
The slimmest ever seen.

She swayed ev'ry zephyr,
She was so wondrous sweet
That God took pity on her
And named her Marguerite.

THE AMERICAN RACE.
An English journalist, Frank Dillon, says of us after a visit of two and a half years, that we are slowly but surely developing into a race, distinctive from any other race, ancient or modern.

In other words, we are told that instead of continuing as an assortment of races living together in one country, we are gradually blending into one, new and different.

We trace our colonial origin for the most part to Great Britain, and we are still indebted to her for our language and most of our laws and customs. How, then, does the new American race differ from the old Anglo-Saxon?

The chief difference lies in qualities of mind and in the expression of mental activity.

The American is given to pointed and witty expression. He is lively, resourceful, always on the qui vive, always keenly interested in novelties and ready to try new ways and new implements.

The Englishman turns naturally to sober forms of thought and expression. He is quiet when an American is likely to be a closer and deeper thinker, and he prefers thoroughness in perfecting old methods to experimenting with new.

The American race is faster in action than any other. It plans and executes with greater facility and rapidity. This is due to two great underlying influences in national life: 1. Unfettered privilege of individual advancement and achievement. 2. Unprecedented opportunities for organizing and developing the resources of a great country. These causes have quickened and inspired the national mind.

In America, any youth may go as far as his abilities warrant. Caste does not deter him. The stimulating influence of this greater opportunity enlivens and enriches American life, character and personality, to an almost incalculable degree.

While the national conscience still reflects the influence of the Pilgrim fathers, the American race must own to many imperfections. The melting pot has its seams. We are young, and a bit raw, crude, and unpolished. As the race matures, we shall put a greater valuation upon the less showy but more worthwhile virtues; a truer and deeper culture of mind and heart, more temperate speech, a higher quality of intellectual honesty, more generous judgments, more thorough-going knowledge of mankind and world affairs.

It is easy to distinguish Americans from others in a foreign capital, like London. Americans appear more hopeful, more receptive to impressions, more democratically inclined to make friendships. They go about in an atmosphere of bright-eyed anticipation, as though expecting the next moment to step into some new adventure.

How potent and confident is youth! Hope of our race! And youth and vigor are the chief national characteristics.

BETTER LIVESTOCK.
Wisconsin agriculturists have been waging a campaign for a long time for better bred stock and the result of activity along this line is showing a good effect. The increase in pure-bred stock, especially, is gratifying to the man who has spent their time and money in encouraging this movement.

In addition to the campaign which has been waged in Wisconsin by the state agricultural college and others interested, the federal government is preparing to go to the aid.

A crusade, which will be gotten into motion about October 1, is announced by the United States department of agriculture, and will be to eliminate the scrub sires from breeding.

The campaign looks forward to the future food needs of the country's increasing population and results from long and careful observation of the live-stock industry in this country. It was planned by the extensive consulting with specialists and breeders. The plan is to hasten the replacement of the multitude of scrub domestic animals with pure-bred or high-grade stock, and also to improve the quality of pure-breds themselves. The goal in view is greater efficiency in production.

The campaign will be the first organized crusade in a large country to improve all livestock simultaneously. It will interfere in no way with any work in livestock improvement now being conducted, but makes all the work more definite and effective by providing official recognition for progressive breeders.

The campaign will be supervised by the department of agriculture in Washington, and in each state by the state agricultural college. County agents and other field workers of the department of agriculture and of the state colleges will handle the campaign locally. Every livestock owner actively co-operating and keeping and using none but pure-bred sires of good quality will be given an emblem as recognition of meritorious effort.

FOREST FIRE LOSSES.
Those who are interested in checking the enormous losses in this country because of forest fires will have an opportunity to respond to the call sent out by the American Forestry association for suggestions as to a national policy.

It is estimated by the association that $23,500 was lost through forest fires in 1918.

"Considering that the annual fire losses and the fact that the markets of the world are opening up to the United States, something must be done to replenish our forests," says a statement by the association. "The war time call upon our forests was tremendous, but the call of peace time activities will greatly exceed the call of war. In peace time we exported about three and one-half billion board feet of lumber and saw logs, to say nothing of home consumption. Lumbermen, lumberland owners and others interested in forestry problems are asked to present their views to the association. The annual meeting of the organization was held at McGregor, Iowa, last week, and some of the suggestions for the saving of forests were discussed.

The danger to horse-drawn vehicles on country roads at night is growing each day with the increase of motor cars. The state law providing that automobiles shall have adequate lights, including red tail lights, is well defined. Although there is some danger to the drivers and occupants of horse-drawn vehicles, especially on narrow country roads, the movement to provide protection has been sidestepped by the legislature. Some farmers have protested against it. But the farmer is safeguarding his property and life by the use of a tail light. If the legislature will not pass a law to cover the situation, the man who drives such a vehicle should voluntarily provide such a safety device. It would be inexpensive to install and perhaps at some time would save both lives and dollars. The automobiles are here to stay and they are increasing in numbers each year, and the time has passed when anyone can afford to take chances with a smash-up.

The crown prince declares he is homesick for his homeland and is eager to get back to Germany so he can aid in its rehabilitation. War produces strange effects! Such ideals were not in the make-up of the Crown Prince when he was cruelly misled by the people of that country into believing they could conquer the world. Germany no doubt realizes her good luck in having him within the confines of Holland.

There is one comforting thought on the mail airplane strike. No one will "go up in the air over it."

ASK US

The Gazette maintains an information bureau at Washington, D. C., under the direction of Frederic J. Haskin. Questions will be answered on any subject. Those desiring information write a letter to the Janesville Gazette, c/o Information Bureau, Washington, D. C., and enclose a stamp. The letter will be answered by our bureau.

Q. How may one estimate the fighting strength of a nation? U. F. S. A. Roughly 25 per cent. of the population of a nation is of fighting age. Of this 20 percent one-half is fit to fight. So the men fit to fight are about 12.5 per cent. of the population.

Q. What was the longest pugilistic contest on record? H. F. S. A. The longest championship fight was that between Jake Kilrane and John L. Sullivan, Richmond, Miss., July 3, 1899. It went for 75 rounds.

Q. Why do some people break step in crossing a bridge? L. H. D. A. There is a rhythm in the tread of soldiers marching in step which might correspond with the rhythm of the bridge, and cause it to so vibrate that it would collapse. To avoid this, step is broken.

Q. What are the highest normal shade temperatures recorded? L. G. T. A. In the Sind desert in India and in the Sahara desert in Africa, the thermometer often goes to 125 degrees and beyond in the shade. There is little danger to human life under these temperatures.

Q. Which state in the union has given the most presidents? B. E. A. The state of Virginia has given more presidents than any other state and for this reason is often called the "Mother of Presidents." The following eight were born there: George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe, William H. Harrison, Zachary Taylor, John Tyler and Woodrow Wilson.

Q. What are "Culture Pearls"? N. R. A. The U. S. bureau of fisheries informs us that for a number of years the Japanese have produced "culture pearls" which are not true pearls, but which are portions of pearls that are fitted together to produce the effect of a perfect pearl. The units composing the culture pearls are coated with true pearl substance produced by the pearl oysters under methods of artificial cultivation.

Q. How may tartar be removed from the teeth? C. A. A. Procure a small quantity of magnesite, wet the toothbrush in warm water, dip into the magnesite, and rub the teeth upon which the tartar has collected. If one application does not entirely remove it give a second treatment the next day.

Q. Were the proportions of men in the army and navy in the recent war as great as those in the civil war? T. H. R. A. In the civil war ten men out of each hundred population served in the army while in the recent war about 100 out of each hundred of population served. The population is so much greater, however, that the men in the army and navy in the recent war, 4,500,000, were just twice as numerous as those in the same service in the civil war, 2,400,000.

Q. How many flashes can a lightning bug produce in a minute? V. F. A. Scientists have recorded the flashes of lightning bugs and have found that they average about 36 a minute, but they vary with the weather and the location.

Q. How long has John Barrett been director of the Pan American union? L. H. D. A. Mr. Barrett has been director of this organization for about 12 years virtually since its inception. His development to its present importance has been under his management.

Q. What is the seismograph? K. H. I. A. The seismograph is an exceedingly delicate instrument used to record earthquake disturbances. These instruments located in scientific institutions can detect earthquakes thousands of miles away.

Q. Please explain the origin of the word "echo"? Q. K. D. A. Mythology tells us that Echo was a nymph who loved Narcissus. He died and she pined away until nothing remained of her but her voice, which inherited her immortality and repeated every sound that reached it all over the world. The phenomenon took its own name from this nymph.

Q. How can I improve the appearance of black kid gloves which have become shoddy? Y. E. G. A. Apply with a brush a little black ink mixed with a teaspoonful of olive oil.

TROUBLE AND ENVY

Trouble comes to every man though he live the best he can. None say good but now and then He must bear the cares of men. None so rich that he can pay Grief and pain to stay away. None so strong but he must know All the weaker brother's woe.

Glory gives no guarantee That you shall be trouble free, And the gold you strive to keep Cannot say you shall not weep. He that walks the ways of earth Must at times be lost to mirth; Each must have his share of rain And it's useless to complain.

Envy no man's costlier dress, It may cover keen distress; In the rich man's home may be Loneliness and misery. And the great man, brave and good, If we only understood, May be suffering bitter woes Than his humbler brother knows.

Each must feel the hurt of pain, Each must take his share of rain. None can go through life without Coming face to face with doubt.

And the price of fame and gold, Stay be bitter griefs untold; Trouble comes to every man Though he live the best he can.

LAKE BAIKAL

Lake Baikal is the great lake of Russia, in more than one sense. It is the deepest lake in the world, and one of the largest, and besides it is, to the Russians, holy. The people who inhabit the region of Lake Baikal firmly believe that both the lake and its surroundings are endowed with supernatural powers and inhabited by unearthly beings. All manner of weird tales mingle with their explanations of any feature of the lake.

Even so simple an object as a great rock lying in the middle of a river just where it flows from Lake Baikal takes on a mysterious significance. If this stone were to slip from place, they say, the whole of Lake Baikal would pour out of its basin and flood the river and probably the continent. Yet even without native superstition many things were strange about the great Russian lake. One of Baikal's phenomena is a species of fish that inhabits the deepest part. These fish have been seen by few persons, for as soon as they are lifted out of their accustomed atmosphere of high water pressure they explode.

Lake Baikal has played an important part in Russian affairs. It lies directly in the way across the continent and before the railway was built around the southern end of the lake, it had to be crossed by Siberian travelers going either west or east.

In summer steamers carried freight and passengers, but in winter when the lake was ice-bound, traffic depended on the slow work of an ice breaker—a steel ship that could cut ice four feet thick, and when the ice became too thick for the breaker, sledges made the 40 miles trip over the ice. During the Russian-Japanese war, when troops had to be rushed from one end of the empire to the other, Lake Baikal was a great obstacle to speed, until engineers laid tracks across the ice sheet and ran trains across it.

REAR ADMIRAL HUSE.
Rear Admiral Harry McL. P. Huse, commander of the train force of the Atlantic fleet, recently rescued a seaman from drowning in the Hudson river. As the admiral was leaving his flagship, the U. S. Columbia, Seaman William J. Buckley, who was the large bowsman, fell overboard when the tide caused the barge to swerve away from the ship.

Stopping only to pull off his coat, the admiral leaped into the water and swam toward Buckley, being carried upstream by the tide.

HUGHES FIXES OUT PEACE TREATY WITH HIS RESERVATIONS

ica assumes no obligation under said article to undertake any military expedition or to employ its armed forces on land or sea unless such action is authorized by the congress of the United States of America, which has exclusive authority to declare war or to determine for the United States of America whether there is any obligation on its part under said article and the means or action by which any such obligation shall be fulfilled.

In his detailed explanation of reservations he thought necessary, Mr. Hughes said, that different constructions had been placed upon article I of the league, and the right of withdrawal from the league and he thought some clarifying statement necessary.

In article XIV he said the clause as to domestic matters such as immigration or tariff, is ambiguous.

Meaning is Ambiguous.

Advocates of the covenant urged that article XXI recognizes and preserves the Monroe doctrine. "But," said Mr. Hughes, the description of the Monroe doctrine in the meaning of the article is far from clear.

He said he fully endorsed Mr. Root's proposed statement of reservation and understanding on this point.

"I agree with Mr. Root that it would be desirable to eliminate articles X, with its guaranty to preserve against external aggression the territorial integrity of all members of the league, and article XVI, which is a trouble breeder and not a peace maker.

"If we are entering upon a new world order of democracies, the inevitable consequences should be to have democracies not promise war after the manner of monarchs. It is idle to attempt to commit free people to the making of war in an unknown contingency.

"We should not enter into a guaranty which would expose us to the charge of bad faith or of having defaulted in our obligation, notwithstanding that we had acted in accordance with its conception of duty in the circumstances disclosed.

While the covenant supporters argue that under article X the council of the league must unanimously agree on the question of the use of force, Mr. Hughes said, and that the United States could veto any proposal calling for intervention, still Mr. Hughes wrote, it is freely recognized that war can be declared only by congress.

Passenger Plane Comes Here Today

Another airplane made by the L. D. Frint Aeronautical company, Milwaukee, arrived here shortly before noon today.

It was planned to have the plane here Saturday afternoon, but owing to the fact that a new plane was being used the machine did not get here until Sunday.

It was thought advisable to return to Milwaukee and bring out the machine which has been here frequently for carrying passengers.

Lieut. Otis and Oberly drove out from Milwaukee. L. D. Frint, the president of the company was also in the plane.

"This is our plan," said L. D. Frint this afternoon, "to rent our machines to the public either to individuals, or to business houses which wish to advertise by means of airplanes. We have already contracted to give exhibitions at several county fairs. Wednesday, we will put on a publicity campaign for the Milwaukee Sentinel, which will consist of a flying circus."

There was a large crowd at the fair grounds this afternoon, and the exhibition of the yellow and black machine. It was planned to take passengers up all of the afternoon.

Evansville is planning on having one of the Frint planes in the city tomorrow morning.

It is planned to have the plane here until tomorrow. Those who wish to ride may make arrangements with E. A. Kemmerer.

These Folks Are Taking No Chances

Another point of confusion in the understanding of Wisconsin's oft-amended and much talked about marriage license laws came to light in County Clerk Howard W. Lee's office today when Harry E. Davies, Chicago, and Lydia Marie Langer, town of Milton, applied for a license so they might get it in time to have the knot tied August 13. Their understanding of the law was that application must be made at least two weeks before the license is granted.

As the law stands today (it may soon be changed again), the license is granted five days after application, unless special permission of County Judge Charles L. Fifield is secured, when the license may be issued and the ceremony take place on the day of application.

CITIES RELUCTANT TO GIVE UP LABOR OFFICES

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, July 28.—Despite the fact that the legislature, at the request of Gov. E. L. Phillips, cut the appropriation for the free employment offices from 100,000 to $50,000, necessitating the closing of nearly one-half of the 20 offices in the state, the cities where these offices have been conducted for more than a year are reluctant to have them abolished and the industrial commission is receiving many protests.

Word has just been received at the office of the industrial commission that the city of Manitowish, one of the six whose offices were recommended to be closed by the governor, has decided to continue the office as a municipal bureau, paying all of the expenses from the city treasury, but requesting that it still be operated in connection with the industrial commission.

The offices in Marinette, West Allis, Eau Claire, Marshfield and Watertown were the other five recommended for abandonment by Gov. Phillips.

There is no opposition will have to close several offices and cut the working forces in all of the others to come within the $50,000 annual appropriation.

It is as natural to go to a public employment office if you want help, or a position as it is to go to the grocery if you want sugar, said George F. Imig, chairman of the industrial commission, who had personal charge of the establishment of the nearly 30 free public employment offices in the state during the war.

It was Mr. Hambrecht who conceived the idea of the municipality providing the office and equipment, and the state and federal governments the personnel to man the offices. A plan which was later adopted by the federal department of labor for the country at large during the war.

BELOIT'S BATTLE SCENE OPENS TUESDAY

The battle of Chateau-Thierry, the Thearle-Duffield $20,000 fireworks spectacle, will open a four nights' engagement under the auspices of the Fairbanks-Morse Athletic Association, Beloit, Tuesday evening. Chateau-Thierry is an open air drama 500 feet in length and requires 300 people to properly present the spectacle.

During the action of the spectacle there will be introduced a number of high grade circus and vaudeville acts, which go to break the tedium of camp life. Under the banners of the various countries their troops parade to national airs.

From the galleys of the circus the scene takes a grimmer turn. Prisoners are brought in, almost immediately the battle breaks with the enemy attack upon the city. The attack is beaten off and the allied troops hold the forts with flags flying—"Old Glory" in the front.

As the battle comes to a close there will be shown a brilliant display of fireworks. As a closing feature there will be thrown across the sky a huge

Heart and Home Problems

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am 20 years old, and have been going with a young man one year my senior for two years and seven months. During that time he has grown to love me and has given up everything that I have asked him to. I told him I returned this love and thought I did. However, not long ago I was with another young man, and although he is only a friend, he made me think that I was too young to settle down to one boy. I know that I do love the first boy, but I also know that I don't love him as he loves me. I have tried to tell him so, but that isn't the easiest thing in the world to do. He says he'll wait until I know, but does not want me to be with anyone else.

My parents do not like my friend, and I know it is for no other reason than that he goes with me. I don't feel they are treating him as a rival in the matter, for my father will hardly speak to him. They acknowledge that they have nothing at all against him, but that they just dislike him.

What would you advise me to do?

ANNE.

You must not try to force love, because to do such a thing is impossible. In fact, your young man so that you will be free to go with others too. You have not said that you were engaged, but your relationship amounts to the same thing.

It is true that the young man may be hurt if he loses you, but he will get over it and will be happier in the end than if you keep up your present relationship.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two young girls, 18 and 19 years old, and very good-looking as well as respected.

A CHANCE TO LIVE

One evening Bernie came home looking tired and ill. He had a headache, he said, and would go to bed early.

Annie made him some special tea, smoothed back his hair and looked at him with anxious willingness to do something.

"No, it's nothing," said Bernie. "It's the spring fever, I guess. Head aches. Been feeling rotten all day. Don't bother. I'll turn in. I want to get up early in the morning."

He did get up early, dressed with special care and left the house betimes, "feeling fine," he said.

That evening Aunt Margie happened in for dinner. She usually came Sundays, seldom during the week.

"Annie, you old darling!" greeted Annie. "Bless you for being a surprise party. We've got a horrid dinner—just stew and salad. I'll send Bernie out for a pie as soon as he shows his face; he hasn't come home yet. Sit down, dear, and hold fannie Rob. Give me your things."

It was not till Annie got through bustling about that she looked at Aunt Margie's face. But when Annie asked her if anything was wrong she reassured her. She just thought she'd come up for a ride on the open car. It had been stuffy at the office.

"Then Bernie came in, kissed Annie, tossed the baby and patted Aunt Margie's shoulder. His keen look told him that Aunt Margie's kind had heard nothing had left the news for her to impart. He could put it off no longer. As soon as dinner was over he went behind Annie's chair and put his arms round her, holding her so she couldn't turn round.

"Don't be scared, Nance," he said in a low, steady tone, "but old envan Simms has given me a bad news."

"Yes, sir," said Bernie. "Now—now," as Annie, terrified, tried to get out of her chair. Aunt Margaret had stolen from the room and was sitting with

HEALTH TALKS

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO DR. READY, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

ERYTHEMA

Erythema is a redness of the skin, varying in degrees from ordinary flushing to a rash difficult to distinguish from scarlet fever. The redness disappears under pressure, the finger, but in severe cases the redness is permanent. It is sometimes spread over the whole body, but more frequently limited in area. Accompanying the skin redness is usually itching, burning, stinging or tenderness, though in some instances the patient feels no discomfort.

All sorts of causes produce erythema in different individuals. It can put my best friend in bed for a week or 10 days of severe erythema by just dusting a little chloroform in his vicinity. A woman who took a teaspoonful of that ancient and honorable "tonic," iron quinine and cod liver oil, developed an erythema like scarlet fever within an hour—from the quinine. A young man with acute erythema, which his druggist called "grippe," took his first bromocryna tablet, which the druggist recommended, and went to bed for a week with erythema—from the acetanilide. Many individuals are annoyed by a flare of the face after eating or after trifling exposure to wind or cold; some experience this flushing only after partaking of certain articles of food.

A score of different drugs will produce erythema when taken internally or applied locally or even handled by susceptible persons.

Various dyes produce erythema in persons sensitive to them. Workers handling mustard, capsicum (pepper), chloroform, ether, aniline, cantharides, arsenic or the essential oils are likely to develop erythema.

Chilblain is a form of erythema occurring on the fingers, toes, ears or nose in person with feeble circulation. Erythema intertrigo is the penderous name doctors give a redness and irritation occasioned when the skin surfaces rub together. Chafing, the vulgar layman calls it. Heat, friction and moisture produce the irritation. It is relieved by careful and frequent washing with warm water and soap, drying with a soft towel and freely powdering with a water-shedding powder, such as zinc stearate or powder. The affected areas should be kept separated by folds of soft linen or muslin, well powdered.

The recognition and avoidance of the cause of erythema is the first aid in any case. That form which follows a hearty meal and particularly slow eating which means prolonged mastication. Aside from lotions or other external applications to relieve itching there is no remedy for the redness. A powder consisting of one part camphor, two parts zinc oxide and three parts cornstarch is useful, and provided it is impalpable, that is, so fine that it cannot be felt between the thumb and finger.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—I have a red, itchy skin on my face. I have tried to increase their length. ANSWER.—Pinch, little, little, let me be as simple as possible.

Q.—Knee Tapping. Kindly tell me why, when undergoing physical examination, one's knees are tapped with the little mallet or the hand of the examiner. What does it indicate when one's legs jump when they are tapped? ANSWER.—It indicates good health. Tapping the tendon below the kneecap causes a reflex muscle contraction of the thigh muscles, which makes the leg kick out. This indicates a normal spinal cord condition.

Benzine Poisoning.

Is there any danger in inhaling the fumes of benzine used in cleaning a room that has been covered with benzine? I got a severe headache from it. (Mrs. M. J.)

ANSWER.—The effect is similar to alcoholic intoxication. First, an unconsciousness, followed by a severe headache, clouded mentality. "Naphtha" is the name given this, in some cases it is called "gasoline" or "kerosene." Benzine (or gasoline) poisoning, from the daily inhalation of fumes, produces anemia, malnutrition, disturbance of digestion and nervous degeneration. It is even an instant cause of artificial ventilation prevents such poisoning.

Too High.

Please tell me whether a blood pressure of 180 points is too high for a man 44 years old. There is nothing the matter with me. I am a shoe dealer. (D. J. J.)

ANSWER.—It is about fifty points too high. Possibly there is something the matter with your habits, your mode of life.

The Daily Novelette

BLACK BALLED

The gun was baited down on Jessup's Cut like anything and all the old towners were seated on Lem Siemmer's porch, with large palm-leaf fans and glasses of ginger ale.

"Yes, sir," said the stranger, mopping himself up on the porch and dropping his brow. "Yes, as I said before, it's the unexpected what happens."

Picking up his Jessup's half-glass of ginger ale, he drained it and went on.

"Once when I was out in Colorado, I was noshin' after some dust when a crowd come to town."

"Well, I hadn't found more'n a pound of dust up to date, so I gets a side-show privilege from the circus and rags up a sheet, cuts a hole in the middle of it and I goes on to put his head through invitin' baseball at three-for-five cents a shot."

"Well, sir, I wuz makin' ten bucks every ten minutes when a guy with a

RAJAH SILK SUIT FOR SUMMER WEAR

Even in these days of one-piece frocks there are still women who insist upon suits as the only practical garment. There are many who always want a women suit but the number who favor summer suits is not large. Since the sports suits and suits have been in higher favor with everyone. This smart little model which is made of white rajah silk is appropriate for hopping, the races or horse luncheon. White silk embroidery and a much tucked vest and collar of net and val lace trim the cassique like coat and large tassels finish the belt. The skirt is plain over the hips, but has small pleats in the front and back. It is customary when wearing such a suit this year not to wear a blouse with it but merely the vest and then the skirt is left on. The suit becomes a two-piece frock. This is especially practical when one is motoring into the country for dinner, for the motor coat may be removed and the skirt left on. The non-suit-like and fully-clad look that some women claim is impossible without a coat.

Jack and Jane and their friends spent the rest of the day with Jeannette and her new found father and mother, and then they bade them good-bye. There were tears in Jeannette's mother's eyes when she thought of leaving her daughter to go to the big world. There were big tears in the eyes of Jane and Jeannette, too, when they realized that they would have to leave each other.

Jack felt sad, because, although he probably wouldn't admit it, he had grown to think an awful lot of Jeannette, so he had to swallow a funny lump in his throat very hard and blind several times before he could say good-bye.

Boch decided there must be something sad going on, for he sat down and took on the most mournful look that little doggie ever had.

Before the children parted they told each other, of course, where to $20,000 GEMS IN BOOTH.

New York.—When Captain Alaric Simpson, of Calcutta, India, stepped into a telephone booth at Hotel Majestic recently he struck a bag on the floor with his foot. Diamonds and other jewels valued at $20,000 rolled out and he picked them up. They had been in a safe at the hotel. The bag was claimed by Mrs. A. E. Fisher, mother of "Bud" Fisher, the well-known cartoonist.

A GIFT?

"I don't know," she said. "She wasn't half as nice to us as some of the other people and yet we were all ways doing everything to make her contented. It was a real nervous strain to mother. I can remember how even after Miss N. had gone two or three days mother would jump when a door was closed sharply and say, 'You mustn't slam the door! You'll disturb Miss N.' The only way I can figure it out is that Miss N. was one of those people who have a gift of making you feel guilty if you don't do just what they want."

WE'VE ALL MET PEOPLE WITH THAT GIFT.

That's an excellent characterization, don't you think? And one that fits quite a few people first and last. Most of you have known people of that sort. Some of you have lived with them and sacrificed and worked and thought and studied and kept them happy—and then wondered why on earth you did it.

Maybe you have wished sometimes that you, too, had the gift of making people feel guilty when everything you do is just to please you. Would you wish for a blind selfishness, for a manner that always becomes disagreeable when its possessor is crossed, for an uncontrollable temper, for an over-sensitivity to criticism?

If you wouldn't, then withdraw your other wish—it is such qualities as these that are behind the gift you were wishing for.

THE WISHING PLANE

The next day they started out to see the places made famous by the peace conference.

First of all they went to the embassy building. It was here that the delegates to the peace conference met daily and decided questions that affected the whole world. The children saw where President Wilson, Premier Clemenceau of France, and the great statesmen of the other nations sat during the peace conference.

Then they went to the Hotel Sturges. Captain Brave arranged for them so the rooms where the American delegates stayed and where they went to decide on America's stand on all of the great questions before going to the main conference.

Then they all climbed into a taxicab and went to the beautiful home of Prince Murat. Now I will tell you about the prince.

He is the only remaining prince in France. He is interesting to Americans because he is the descendant of a famous family. His father, Prince Achille Murat. The present prince's father was born in New Jersey. He was related to Napoleon Bonaparte's sister, too. Mother! I tell you who Napoleon was!

The Murat home is full of relics of George Washington's time. When President Wilson decided to go to France for the peace conference, the prince readily offered his home to the president and moved out himself that the president might occupy it. The president was more than glad to live there, because the high quality of the house reminded him of great men of early times, who had done much to make America such a wonderful nation.

The children saw the study where President Wilson worked and the beautiful rooms that he and Mrs. Wilson occupied.

Tomorrow I will tell you about their trip to the palace at Versailles where the peace treaty was signed.

COST OF EDUCATION.

London.—The cost of education is steadily increasing in England and school teachers' salaries alone is $3,300 a year in two years from $775,000 to $1,225,000.

$25 FOR QUART OF MILK.

London.—It was for my sick child, said Robert Haley Gane, porter who was fined $25 for stealing a quart of milk from a churn at Farnborough station.

$400 DIRTY MILK FINE.

London.—Convicted of adulterating milk with very dirty water, George Pink, a Catshead dairymilk, was fined $400 at Farnham. Pink's wife said the can from which the sample was taken contained washing-up water and a little milk she was carrying to some calves. She sold it to the inspector as "milk" because "I was nervous," she added.

Household Hints

MENU HINT.

Breakfast. Cantaloupes. Buttered Toast. Coffee. Luncheon. Potato Salad. Bran Rolls and Butter. Chocolate Blanch Manger. Dinner. "Ravioli." Mixed Pickle. Rye Bread. Prune Whip. Tea.

TRIED RECIPES.

Ravioli.—Take one onion (cut fine) and two peppers (cut in long narrow strips) simmer in a little bacon fryings until browned. Then mix in one pound of hamburger steak and one-half pound ground pork and salt to taste. Roll out a noodle dough and cut in one-inch squares. Have a tablespoon of the meat on each of these squares of dough and pinch the sides together so that no meat can escape. Drop into the boiling water and let cook for one-half hour. When done arrange on a platter and pour over a tomato sauce seasoned with onion and serve piping hot with some grated cheese.

Spotted Sauce.—One six cold potatoes, one cucumber, one plimento (canned), one small onion. Let cucumber stand in ice water one hour before using. Mix with the following dressing: Set one-half pint of cream on a slow fire. Mix with cold water into a thin paste, two tablespoons flour, two tablespoons sugar and one tablespoon custard and one-half teaspoon salt. Mix cream bubbles, stir this in well and let stand until mixture boils. Then add one-half cup of vinegar and take from fire. Fold in an egg, well beaten, with a little cold water added (this prevents curdling).

Pudding.—One egg, a pinch of salt, half cup water, half cup cooking molasses, one tablespoon melted butter, two cups sifted flour, one small teaspoon powdered cinnamon, same of soda; steam one hour. This can be varied by putting in a half cup of seedless raisins. To be eaten with cream or milk, unsweetened or with lemon sauce. Sufficient for six people. Part of it can be used and the left over portion put away and warmed up by steaming two or three days later. Children like to eat it cold, some as cake.

Steamed Rice.—One-half cup of rice, a little salt and two cups of milk; steamed one hour; in the last few minutes stir in a half cup of seedless raisins. When well cooked remove to individual dishes, put a little butter on it, sprinkle on a little cinnamon and slice a banana on top of it. This recipe is for two people for a main dish, but to use as a dessert will serve six.

DISCOVERIES.

A well known chef always cuts off the end of the cucumbers and vigorously rubs it over the cut edge of the cucumber. He does this to extract the poisonous substance.

The down or feathers will not work through a pillow if you iron the inside of the cover with a hot iron.
